Jean Leon Gerome

Born in Vesoul in 1824. A pupil of Paul Delaroche, he accompanied his master to Italy, and upon his return studied with Gleyre. He failed to secure the Prix de Rome, but won a third-class medal for his "Cocks Fighting," in 1 47. Then he visited Russia and Egypt, bringing back from the latter a large stock of pictures, which instantly established his reputation. During the next twenty years he alternated Oriental subjects with classical pictures, such as "Phryne Before the Tribunal" and the "Death of Caesar," which placed him in the front rank of contemporary historical and genre painters, He has been an indefatigable student of the manners and accessories of the various periods which he paints, is a learned draughtsman and a master of characterization, and has reaped every honor that France bestows upon a favorite painter

Jules Lefebvre

Lefebvre, "Probably the most pronounced in academic methods" among contemporary French painters, was born at Tournan, in the Seine et Marne, in 1836. He became a pupil of Leon Cogniet at the Beaux-Arts, and made his debut at the Salon with a portrait in 1855, since which year he has been a regular contributor. In 1861 he secured the Prix de Rome with a "Death of Priam," and five years later a Salon medal for his "Nymph and Bacchus," which was purchased for the Luxembourg. His long list of honors includes the Grand Prix at the Exposition of 1889. He is a member of the Institute, a Commander of the Legion, and at this last Exposition was Hors Concours. His pictures figure in the Museum of the Luxembourg and in the great galleries of France and foreign countries. He is a draughtsman of pronounced ability, representing particularly the nude in a pure and elevated style, which his portraits are characterized by force and directness.
